Portions of Bremen, Rich and Frankfort Vote on High School District Sat. July 11

The Tinley Park territory is planning for a very important weekend for on Saturday, July 11 the very much discussed creation of a new high school district embracing portions of Bremen, Rich and Frankfort townships will be voted on at a special election to be held in the Forest Ridge, Tinley Park, Sedan Prairie and Strassenburg public schools. The polls will be open from 6 a.m. to 5 p.m.

At a mass meeting held Tuesday evening at the Tinley Park public school the proponents of the new high school district presented facts and figures relative to the new district and discussed at length the topic of purposes of organizing the high school district.

Wesley Stemm acted as chairman

The purpose of organizing the proposed High School District is quite obvious after an examination of the existing non-high school facts.

Benefits to the taxpayer are outlined herein and every taxpayer will endorse this plan wholeheartedly as a money saving, property improvement plan.

Those who have children who are or will be attending high school in the future will welcome the plan without reservation. Their children will derive benefits of being given prime and immediate consideration of personal social and vocational guidance. The problems of the community will be of prime consideration in the guidance program. These children will be able to participate in activities which will make them a more compact, social and community minded group.

It is NOT part of the plan to erect a building at this time. Owing to the war, buildings of this type are not encouraged, but at the completion of the war, the Federal Government will give aid and money to erect such a building, and will bear the greatest share of the cost.

WHAT ABOUT PRESENT TAXATION?

At the present time all the area included in the proposed district is a part of the Non-High School District of Cook and Will County. Each property owner pays taxes to this district for the purpose of educating the children residing in this area. Non-High School District pays the tax.

Each taxpayer now pays an educational tax to Non-High School at the rate of $1.09 per $100.00 assessed valuation. There is no building tax paid to Non-High School.

At the present time Non-High School District is growing smaller in area. This means that the tax rate for the remaining will necessarily be increased since the present Bonded indebtedness amounts to $1,155,000.00 which is the legal limit. Therefore, the tax rate must be increased or the District will be dissolved and the children in this area will have no provision for secondary education.

It is with this situation in view that your committee has made the recommendation that we organize at this time a High School District, so that we will have a compact district that will have a low High School Taxation and a child load that will not overtax or overspend our money.

WHAT ABOUT PROPOSED TAXATION?

Under the proposed plan for the High School District the Educational tax rate will amount to $1.00 per $100.00 assessed valuation. This amounts to 9 cents less than the present rate. This is the legal limit that can be levied without referendum. In addition to this an additional 5 cents per $100.00 assessed valuation should be levied as a reserve in the building fund for the purpose of making plans for a future building which will be erected at some distant future date. This will be a total of $1.05 per $100.00 assessed valuation. Thus, remaining as less than the present tax rate.

WHAT ABOUT PROPERTY VALUES?

It is common knowledge that wherever high schools have been erected the property of the community and the surrounding area increases in value to the benefit of the owners of such property. Is this not a desirable thing? Property owners are always desirous of increasing the value of property. It represents an addition to their investment. In these times it is difficult to secure an increase in investments as easily as this.

WHAT ABOUT THE CHILDREN?

In any school the child is the first consideration. At the present time our children are removed from the high school by great distances, having to depend upon bus or railroad transportation. This means that they cannot participate in activities which take extra time. They are not available for conferences with the instructors which would add in their enjoyment of life and be of advantage to them when they prepare for their profession or for continued education in college. Our children will be better off by having the close contact of a high school in their own community of which they are the most important part. Transportation would be arranged to give each child the benefit of the high school to the fullest.

WHAT ABOUT THE COMMUNITY?

The whole community at the present time has no school activities to attach themselves to. The school should be the center of all community activities. Here the community meets, learns, develops and prospers. Here is an outlet for the leisure time of the community where the people can attain their ambition of pursuing courses of special interest and hobbies of a lifetime.

WHAT ABOUT THE INDIVIDUAL?

The benefit to the individual taxpayer has already been set forth in brief. It seems logical that each taxpayer will want to cut down taxes. What better opportunity do we have of lowering our taxes to the very minimum? The family will be a better unit in the fact that all members will have a common interest in the school and the parent. Then each have the same place to go for the same interests.

Q. How will transportation of pupils be taken care of under a New High School District?

A. The new district will pay 25% of the transportation and the balance by the State up to $15.00.

Q. Why should we organize a high school district at this time when our country is at war?

A. Because the non-high school district that we are now a part of will soon be dissolved. We will then be forced to educate our own children of high school age. State law requires that children attend school through age of 16. If each parent needed to pay the tuition it would cost more than $100.00 per child.

Q. Will the proposed district raise my taxes now?

A. No. It will lower them from $1.09 per $100.00 assessed valuation to $1.00 per $100.00 assessed valuation, the same as Orland and Palos Park.

Q. Is the proposed district large enough to support a high school?

A. Yes. The state law provided that a territory must have an assessed valuation of at least $1,000,000 and fifteen hundred residents. The proposed district has an assessed valuation of $2,293,856.00 and approximately 3500 residents. The district proposed has a tax collection of 92% which is far above other high school districts in our area.

TAXES. Non-high school territory is dwindling rapidly. On every hand, communities are voting their own districts. To of the meeting. Attorney Whiteside of Chicago who represents the Cook County Superintendent of Schools was present, as also was Attorney Krusemark of Frankfort.

The latter has been very much opposed to the creation of the proposed district and quite a number of residents of the Sedan Prairie district accompanied him to the meeting. Both Attorneys argued their various positions on the question and some quite enlightening facts were brought out in the course of the discussion. The following article completely covers the various points involved in the creation of the new district.

Several articles have appeared in this paper from the opposition side and we now present the view of those in favor of the new district.

FRANKFORT METHODISTS TO HAVE BIRTHDAY

Along in 1832 the first sermon was preached in Frankfort township. Father Beggs pioneer minister is presumed to have been the first clergyman to conduct services in this section.

Later settlers of what was then known as the Hickory Creek Settlement met at the home of Ambrose Doty where church services were conducted until log school houses came into existence. Out of this early beginning of Christian worship evolved the Methodist congregation of Frankfort and this year marks the 85th anniversary of the founding of this territory.

The event will be commemorated by a special service Sunday, July 19. This will be a very festive occasion and a special fitting service of morning worship is in preparation. Rev. Rudolph Malek the pastor will be in charge of the service which will begin at 10:00 a.m. There will be special music, the reading of a historical sketch etc.

All former members and friends of the Frankfort Methodist church are most cordially invited to attend this anniversary service.

mention but a few nearby, Stickney, Beecher, Crete, Orland Park, Palos Park and Peotone have completed such organizations in the past year. These districts, like our own, have relatively high tax raising valuations and have used this means to keep from helping support such DENSE POPULATION AREAS with the low tax-raising ability as Elmwood Park and part of Bremen.

Chas. Haass, Son of Pioneer Frankfort Doctor Dies

Chas. Haass, aged 82 years, a widely known old time resident of Frankfort, died Monday, July 6 in his home in Frankfort following a two weeks illness. Mr. Haass spent his entire life here, with the exception of a few years residence in Mendota, Ill.

He was the son of the late Dr. Haass at one time a prominent physician in Frankfort. Surviving are his only brother George and a number of other relatives. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home with burial in Pleasant Hill Cemetery, Rev. G. S. Gerhold of St. Peter's Evangelical church officiating.

New Lenox Gets Its First Fire Truck

The New Lenox Fire District which was organized sometime ago, has finally received its new fire truck, which has been placed into service the past week. F. Shields, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the recently organized fire protection district announces that for the time being the fire truck will be stationed at the New Lenox Lumber and Hardware Company yards.

Arrangements are now being made for the building of a fire station and a telephone and siren alarm system will later be installed.

Frank Vally secretary of the Lumber Company, is the chief of the fire department which is being organized on the volunteer basis. Volunteer fire men are now being enrolled. The fire truck is of latest design, equipped to pump 500 gallons of water a minute, has a siren, bell, ladders, axes, flasher lights, pikes, buckets and hand extinguisher and Indian pumps, and all other items carried by modern fire departments. The new fire fighting apparatus was on public display for the first time in the 4th of July parade at Marley.

FRANKFORT BOARD CONDEMS HAZARD

The Village Board of Frankfort at their monthly meeting held Monday evening passed an ordinance condemning the old Rider building and have asked the owners to tear down same. This building was partially burned in a fire several years ago and has never been repaired. The property is in an estate and the heirs are located in California.

They have been notified a number of times to place this property in repair but have failed to do so.

The ordinance says that the building has become a hazard and also a danger to the public health and has given the owners 10 days in which to remove this nuisance. Failure to do so will no doubt result in legal proceedings.

The Village board also proposed using the motor fuel gas tax from the state for improving the village drainage system, but it is understood the state is opposed to this and the matter has been held up for further investigation. The Board also issued 6 months period tavern licenses to Baumann Bros. and Mrs. Grace Raffauf.

FRANKFORT STORES AND BARBERSHOP TO KEEP CLOSED ON SUNDAYS

All Frankfort stores and the barbershop who have remained open on Sunday morning for many years will remain closed on Sundays on and after Sunday, July 19.

FRANKFORT HAS NEW SIREN BLOWER

Henry F. Smit, who has been employed at the Heisner Garage and who has been blowing the fire siren for the Village of Frankfort, has turned in his resignation as he has quit the garage business and has gone to farming on the Chas. Heisner farm. Herbert Kohlhaugen is now in charge of blowing the fire siren.

A rather interesting feature of Mr. Smit's service was that every day he blew the siren right on time and the residents of Frankfort knew when the siren blew that it was always exactly 12 o'clock.

A MEDICAL PATIENT

Mrs. Harry Balchowsky has been a patient at the St. Joseph's hospital, Joliet the past week.

WLS Radio Stars To Entertain at Frankfort Firemen Picnic July 19

The annual event which brings out hundreds of people to the Frankfort Grove will again this year be celebrated when the Frankfort Fire Department will sponsor their annual picnic on Sunday, July 19 afternoon and evening.

There are many interesting features of the new barn dance show but the main and original idea remains, rustic comedy and music in the setting of the hayloft, but it is vaudeville up to date and novelty of the highest standard. The Saturday night coast to coast broadcast of this show still ranks among radio's most popular program. Mayor George Sangameister advises that the following WLS stars will be present: Rusty Gill, Pat Butram, Grace Wilson, Reggie Cross Pepper Hawthorne plus other outstanding entertainment.

MOKENA WATER TANK BEING RE-CLEANED AND NEWLY PAINTED

At the Mokena Village board meeting Tuesday evening it was decided that the water tower in the village is in need of cleaning and repainting. The job was awarded to J. E. Ranz of the Abroad Industrial Painters of Chicago for the sum of $250.00 which includes the cleaning of the inside of the tank and painting same.

The legs of the water tower are not included in this painting job as they are still quite well covered with the previous coat of paint. Mr. Ranz arrived Thursday to begin the work. The pumping station has been pumping water directly into the mains, while the tank is being re-cleaned.

MOKENA VILLAGE TREASURER AND WATER PUMPER RE-APPOINTED

The term of Miss Elmira McGovney as Village Treasurer expired July 1, as also did the yearly contract of Martin Muehler water pumper.

Both were re-engaged for the ensuing year at the same salary as before. The street committee reported that the work of improving village streets from the state gas tax fund will be delayed for a few weeks due to the inability of the contractor to secure the needed crushed stone. But it is thought the work may be completed within the next few weeks.

JUKE BOXES MUST BE QUIET BY MID-NIGHT SAYS FRANKFORT BOARD

Of late numerous complaints have been lodged with the Frankfort Village Board officials that juke boxes have been playing after midnight and disturbing the residents within the vicinity where the juke boxes are played. The Board accordingly has notified the juke box operators that no more music can be played after 12 o'clock and that the places of business must close at 1 o'clock.

The Board officials state that if their requests are not heeded they will pass an ordinance licensing all juke boxes operating in the village limits. Complaints have also been made that mufflers have been taken off of automobiles and that they have been creating nightly disturbances with their cut outs wide open.

The board is asking all automobile owners to cooperate in abolishing this nuisance.

ST. MARY'S PARISH TO HOLD ANNUAL PICNIC

Members of St. Mary's parish of Mokena are making plans for their annual picnic and chicken dinner to be held on Sunday, July 26 in the parish grounds. There will be entertainment and games. The public is cordially invited to attend.

MARLEY HOLDS 60TH ANNUAL PARADE

For the 60th year without interruption Marley held its traditional Fourth of July parade Saturday morning. This time our nation being at war, the parade reflected the war period with floats, one of which depicted the Nazis and the Japs with their heads fastened in an old pillory. Another float showed an army truck bringing in the wounded from the battle field. The parade while short, was very outstanding.

At the close of the parade the usual Fourth of July picnic with its program of sports and games was held in the Storm's Grove.

Civilian Front Prepared for War Economy

Americans to Face Changes Necessary For Final Victory

By CLIFF LANGE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Uncle Sam says, "There are going to be some changes made!"

Those changes, on a nationwide scale, are going to affect 132 million Americans. They will reach into every home in the United States and influence the lives and habits of all.

According to the Office for Emergency Management's division of civilian supply, the next few months will see the effects of war economy in the fields of clothing, transportation, housing and food. Some of the slow, but soon to accelerate, changes are already noticeable.

For many months specialists in the Division of Civilian Supply, working in conjunction with other federal departments, have been gauging and charting the needs of this nation's civilian population. Once these needs have been plotted, they will then be fitted in with the nation's war economy.

Civilians Must Sacrifice, Too.
In other words, it all means this: If it is found necessary to use certain food products for armed forces, or certain pieces of equipment for defense plants, or certain material for defense plant workers, then the ordinary civilians of this nation are going to do without to fill that need. Lack of cargo space for imports also means that many former products purchased abroad for home consumption are not going to be available for Americans.

Officials in Washington commented on the fact that there have been many rumors about rationing of clothing.

Joseph L. Weiner, deputy director of the division of Civilian supply, had this to say about it: "It appears now that the rationing of clothing can be avoided this year."

That doesn't mean though there will be no changes made. Beside the present style modifications (cuffless trousers, for instance) other garments will not be as "glamorous" as they have been. Frills on clothing are out.

The American people are going to dress for war, even though they are on the home front fighting.

The military demand for wool is going to bring about additional minor style changes. To conserve on wool, cloth manufacturers are going to have to blend their allotted supply of that material with other materials. Americans are going to wear more cotton.

Another problem in the clothing field that is pending is leather. As federal rationing officials put it concerning any possible leather shortage, "There is nothing in the leather picture to get excited about now." But the problem is still there. There are still plenty of shoes in the stores for civilians, but the demands of the armed forces for shoes increase very rapidly.

All in all, Americans working hard on the home front needn't think that they won't be warmly and adequately clothed this coming winter. They will be even though there isn't going to be the former "dressiness" on their attire.

This picture indicates one of the reasons why the American people are going to have less wool in their clothing. Above you see great bolts of woolen cloth being checked before being made into uniforms for Uncle Sam's fighting men.

Transportation difficulties, too, are going to bring about decided changes in the American way of living during the war.

Everyone knows there is a shortage of gasoline. But they should also know there is a growing shortage of fuel oil.

This means a change in the usual "visiting" habits of not only Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jones, but of Little Johnny, Sister Helen, Grandma and Grandpa, and the rest of the family and their relatives.

More Staying at Home.

For instance: With a shortage of gasoline, in fact, a rationing of that fuel, there is going to be more of the "stay at home" attitude. Sister Helen's fellow isn't going to be able to take her out riding. Little Johnny isn't going to be allowed to have the car to drive to the next town to bowl or go sightseeing.

Mom and Pop aren't going to get in the car and drive 40 or 50 miles to the next town to purchase supplies, or go to a show, or visit friends. They are going to do all their purchasing at home, go to shows in their home-town, and visit their friends in town more often than before.

Grandma and Grandpa are going to have to forego their usual Sunday ride or customary visit to old friends over in another section of the county.

All in all, the American family is going to be thrown back on their own more than ever.

It won't take long, though, before they fully realize that the idea of "stay at home" is as enjoyable and beneficial as the "buy at home" plan.

Main Street 'Dim Out.'

It is highly probable, that when more and more electric power is needed, the lights on Main streets—thousands of Main streets throughout the United States—will be dimmed. Many towns will be having "dimouts" instead of the blackouts which cities and towns along the East and West coast are experiencing.

You might think that your tomorrow's promise to be dull, what with rationing of many articles, unavailability of others, staying at home, and curtailed railroad and bus travel. You might think so for a short time. But then, when you fully realize what you can do, and what you are doing for the coming victory, it won't be thought of as drab and dull.

You will realize it is in freedom's name that you are doing without many formerly ordinary things of everyday living. You will become conscious of the fact that you aren't standing in breadlines for food, or listening to round after round of propaganda radio programs, or staying indoors after the curfew sounds. Those things are true in a Hitler-dominated nation.

A change in the housing habits of the American people will be noticeable only in those areas where critical victory projects are under way.

Unlike enforced labor in dictator-dominated Europe, American workers are moving voluntarily to those cities where projects are being worked day and night, employing thousands upon thousands of people. Consequently, many towns have

The 'Army' of Cooks

America's women have been drafted, too.

Administrator of the Office of Defense, Health and Welfare Services, Paul V. McNutt, and staff, are calling upon the women of America to see to it that the workers and children of this nation get the most wholesome food, prepared appetizingly.

Now watch the Nation's Army of Cooks lead their army to vitality, health, and happiness.

Here are some of their army rules of cooking warfare:
Well balanced meals.
Tasty meals.

Meals with plenty of energizing foodstuffs.
Plenty of food without wasting it.

Economical and thoughtful substitution for those foodstuffs not obtainable.

found a continually growing housing shortage.

Even trailer-camp towns, laid out on the edge of the towns themselves, are being filled to capacity. Rather than resort to the plan enforced in England, where compulsory billeting of war workers has been resorted to, U. S. officials are appealing to those who own homes in industrial zones to let out their spare rooms to workers. Many former "private" homes are now being rented to "outsiders."

Then, too, most war workers—many of whom have left their wives and children at home—are not in a position to buy a home, either because their incomes are not sufficient, or because they may have to be moved at any time.

As a result federal officials are discouraging privately financed home construction and are seeking priority assistance on those projects that will be made available for rental to workers.

Forego Home Building.

Many prospective home owners will have to forego building their own homes this year, or buying one already constructed. Uncle Sam wants his defense area workers housed properly so that they can continue producing the necessary arms and armament.

More noticeable than in the above mentioned instances are the changes in the eating habits of America's consumers.

More rationing in various foodstuffs other than sugar seem highly probable. Increased rationing doesn't mean, however, that this country will lack a sufficient supply of staples, or that the American diet will lack its necessary and vital elements.

The eating habits of the nation will have to change. Look for many of our imported foodstuffs to become more and more scarce, and probably rationed. Many of the food staples produced or grown within the country will become scarce too. Much of the food is going to the U. S. armed forces here in the United States, and wherever they might be stationed in the world.

All in all, Americans today are experiencing in part what their British Allies have experienced for some time. Today the American people are getting their first experience lessons of what is in store for them as the nation moves forward.

That they can take it, there is no doubt. That they can readjust their lives to the conditions of the day is also practically a certainty. That they can carry on as well as—or maybe better than—industry is to be proven. It is going to be interesting to watch America change the world by changing its habits.

Absolute Defeat of Nazis and Japs Deemed Necessary . . . Sub Menace Will Be Overcome, Say Observers . . .
Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

WASHINGTON.—Despite the feverish speed with which the shipyards, old and new, of the United Nations are turning out ships, the cold fact remains that for every ton of new shipping put into the water considerably more than two tons of old shipping are destroyed by submarines.

At a recent conference in Washington an air enthusiast wanted to know why we could not transport men and supplies to Europe by air. The answer is that every bomber which is flown over now is loaded to capacity, with passengers, mail and such cargo as can be taken. But that is only a drop in the bucket, though it looms large in figures. It takes hundreds of big bombers to carry as much cargo as one medium-sized freighter.

So our experts, and the British, working with them on this problem of how to supply a second front, as well as how to increase the flow of supplies to Russia, are not figuring on doing it by planes. Planes will continue to be flown chiefly where they are needed for war purposes. What they carry will always be incidental.

Expediting Ship Movements

Everything possible has been done in the way of expediting ship movements.

Wooden ships which will use old-fashioned sail power are being built, particularly in South America. Men are being trained to man the new ships.

But still the goods pile up, waiting for shipment. Shipping is still the bottleneck. Actually the goods are moving in extraordinary volume. Many heartening reports attest that.

Now the shipbuilding figures are definitely known. The ship-sinking figures are not officially made public. At the same time it is admitted that the sinkings exceed the launchings by the prodigious ratio stated.

From this combination of facts observers here believe positively that some new method or weapon has been worked out on which the officials are counting to overcome the submarine menace.

The Expressed Attitude Toward The Nazis, Japs and Facists

The war news continues to be mixed—a welcome change because there was a mighty long time when nearly all of it was bad. But there is one thought which needs only to be suggested to be encouraging. This is a thought, incidentally, which comes from diplomats here, highly astute gentlemen whose needs seldom run away with their hearts.

The suggestion which this writer heard in a group of diplomats the other day is this:

"What do you imagine the Germans, the Japanese and the Italians are thinking about, as they face the future?"

Naturally, a German, or a Jap, or an Italian might retort: "What do you imagine the Americans, and the British and the Chinese are thinking about as THEY face the future?"

Well, we cannot speak for the others, but it is pretty well known what the Americans are thinking when they assume a prophetic role.

There is not a doubt anywhere in this land, that sooner or later we are going to win this war. On the contrary President Roosevelt has found it necessary to caution against too much optimism.

One can find many differences of opinion as to what should be done to avoid a repetition of the World war, but no difference at all as to the conditions which must exist when fighting stops. Those conditions are that Germany, Japan and Italy must be thoroughly beaten.

There are a few, perhaps, who think it will not be necessary to make the beating of Italy so very thorough, but there is no division of opinion about Germany and Japan.

The Nipponese, most Americans seem to think, must be forced to disgorge not only their conquests in this war, but those of previous wars and aggrandisements.

What do we imagine the Germans and Japs are thinking?

(We needn't worry about the Italians. We KNOW they wish the war was over, and know in their hearts that a defeat for Germany probably would be better for them than a victory for their present masters.)

But most of the Germans know a great deal more than the Nazi radio tells them.

Even more bitterly, they know something about their own casualty lists—not as to the actual figures, save a very few of them, but they do know that the totals must be terrific because they know so many persons whose husbands, brothers, sons and fathers have been killed.

An Inhibited Drunk

'Tames' Leo the Lion

CHICAGO.—For the fourth time Leo Breit went to the circus at the Chicago Stadium, bought a 15-cent whip, cracked it before a lion cage and shouted, "Sit up, Leo, sit up!" the judge learned.

Said Breit in way of explanation, "I was drinking. I always want to tame lions and tigers when I drink."

Revenge Now Sole Aim of Hawaiians

Now Best Guarded Outpost Of United States.

HONOLULU.—If you remember Hawaii as the carefree land of ukuleles, surf boards, flowered leis, you had better hang on to that precious memory, brother—because Hawaii has become the most war-girded, gun-bristling defense outpost of the United States.

And if you think "Remember Pearl Harbor" is a battle cry on the mainland, you should see and feel the grim revenge-spirit that saturates these once-glamorous Pacific playlands.

Scars of the Japanese backstab of December 7 have long since been eradicated from the fertile green islands. Pearl Harbor is a bustling port which leaves you slightly awed when you see it for the first time, and watch huge cranes swing in the tropical sunlight to the time of whistles and shouts of working men.

You realize: "Here Is War!" And it is unlike any war preparedness you saw in the States.

Pearl Harbor today is a mightier base than it has ever been. It is the wounds in the hearts of the people that have not healed. Revenge is the only antidote.

That is why this Paradise of the Pacific, once a tourist Eden, has become the most war-conscious of any United States soil.

Through the processes of actual war—the sting of enemy bombs, the sight of enemy aircraft, the loss of gallant American lives—Honolulu has become a sinewy fighting machine. It is lean and hard and tough.

Coal Digger's Permanent

Has the Fellows Guessing

KISTLER, W. VA.—Bill Dodson is 20, a miner and no sissy, so he caused quite a stir at one of the combination barber shops and beauty salons when he strode into the ladies' end of the establishment and ordered "the works."

As he sat under the drier, Dodson was interviewed.

"What kind of a permanent are you getting?"

"I dunno."

"How much is it going to set you back?"

"I dunno."

(The beautician explained it would cost him $3.25 for each of 12 curls.)

"Won't the fellows kid you when you get through with this?"

"I dunno."

Man Robbed of Toe, $400

And Ring in Second Try

LONG BEACH, CALIF.—Robbers, who a month ago injured one of Nicholas Periseck's fingers so badly in trying to remove a ring that the finger had to be amputated, robbed him again and cut off one of his toes.

Periseck said in the first holdup the robbers took $75 and tried to cut off his finger when his $750 diamond ring proved too tight to slip off.

Later they not only got the ring, from another finger, but found $400 he had hidden in a shoe. Then the robber leader cut off his toe.

"You told the cops about that other job," Periseck quoted him. "We'll give you something to remember us by."

Man-Eating Rooster Is

Nabbed, Captor a Hero

GLEN COVE, N. Y.—Frank Doxey, the local dog catcher, was hailed as a hero after capturing a man-eating rooster that had been terrorizing residents for several days.

Eating up their favorite rose bushes was not too bad an offense, home owners said, but when the rooster took several bites out of Mrs. Maurice Cohen's legs and pecked at her back, that was something else.

Summoned post-haste after the felonious assault, Doxey snared the wild bird with a neat cast of his net, and it now resides behind bars.

ELMER TWITCHELL AND FOOD CONTROL

Uncle Sam has now named a WPBFR, War Production Board Food Requirement Committee. It will look into the matter of food requirements during the war, with a view to conservation.

A good deal could be accomplished right off the bat by a simple but inflexible rule requiring people to stop overloading the fork.

We are a nation of overloaders, and if we are to guard against food shortages something's gotta be done to check us up. Watch the average American eat today, in the middle of a global war, and would you suspect he was subsisting during a great conflict? You would not. You would imagine he was trying for a new record at a picnic ground.

Elmer Twitchell, famous calorie student, pinchole player and stamp collector, has been studying the food situation, and he thinks that if Uncle Sam wants to avoid waste Step Number One should be the abolition of the Three-Decker Sandwich.

"The upper deck is a mere waste of bread," declares Elmer, "and it also involves a further waste of lettuce. There is little in these modern three-deckers except lettuce, anyhow, unless you want to admit that those tomato slices are food."

"I am for a National Committee for the Control of Lettuce also," continued Elmer. "If there is one thing which lunchroom men are profligate with it is lettuce. Of course, in many cases this comes under the head of second-hand or reconditioned lettuce."

"This new Government board should also look into the French fried situation. Boy, there's a food waste for you! The American lunchroom has come to regard French fries as a mere matter of stuffing. They are just plate fillers. They are so greasy that nobody finishes 'em, so the result is more waste. Let us have a 75 per cent cut in French fries at once by all means!"

"Then there is the dining car toast situation. Did you ever try eating the toast you get with a steak sandwich on a railroad train? Mister, it was never meant to eat. Let us do something about this."

Elmer was getting quite excited. "And then there is the chicken pie situation," he resumed. "Chicken is certainly conserved through the average chicken pie, but nobody eats those onions and potatoes with which they are filled to the exclusion of anything resembling meat."

"And, by the way, if we want to save food let's soft pedal all this vitamin talk. Millions of Americans are not eating because they want the food immediately involved. They are on a vitamin binge."

'Wardrobe Stretchers' For Fashion-Conscious Women Can Be Had

Look in the accessory department of the store for the little extras called "wardrobe stretchers," is the word which Miss Barbara Borhek, instructor in home economics, University of Illinois college of agriculture, has for fashion-conscious women.

"The new WPB ruling L85 has made it impossible to buy such things as extra little jackets with a dress or little colorful aprons attached to a dress.

"So for a while at least, it will become more and more the fashion to offer these additions at the accessory counter."

This will be the place, she said, to keep one's eyes open for such tricks as patchwork ruffling for the bottom of a gay skirt, a gingham belt with huge pockets attached and a matching color, a separate wool sleeve yoke for winter color to transform an old dress or a printed tie-on peplum.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Because he and his partner, Cruger, need the money to keep Norland Airways in business, Alan Slade agrees to fly a "scientist" named Frayne and his partner, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds Cruger buys a plane, a Lockheed, which is stolen. When he returns from the Anawotto Slade starts out to look for the plane. He has three clues, one of which appears to have lead up a blind alley. Slade thought the missing plane had some connection with Frayne, but when he returned to where he left the swan-hunter there was no trace of the plane, and Frayne appeared to be hunting swans. The second clue is the story of Umanak, the eskimo, about a "ghost" plane that is supposed to come from Echo Harbor. The third clue is Slade's hunch that if he finds a flyer named Slim Tumstead he will find the plane. Tumstead, who knows about the Lockheed and about Frayne, has disappeared. Now Slade, Umanak, and Slade's old prospector friends, Zeke and Minty, are all out looking for the plane. Slade has just learned that his hunch was sound. Tumstead is with Frayne, and they have a plane somewhere.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XIII

"On the contrary," retorted the older man, "you will sail away quite comfortably on the Kovalevka when she takes out her cargo. You will be carried safe and sound to Vladivostok, with money enough, remember, to give you three years of travel in Europe and all the vodka your heart may desire."

Tumstead seemed to be considering this.

"But why doesn't your Kovalevka show up?" he questioned.

"She will come," was the precise answer, "when we are ready for her. Ice conditions have not been of the best. And we, too, have been a little slow in getting our shipment in shape."

"So damned slow," Tumstead retorted, "your stuff won't be any use to you. While you're combing the icicles out of your hair the war'll be over."

"Silence," commanded the steeler voice. "The men of my race are taught to do what they are commanded to do."

"And some of it," retorted the other, "I'd call uncommonly dirty work."

"It is not for you to question the nature of my work."

Tumstead's laugh was harsh. "No, I'm merely a flyer," he acceded. "But I'm not the kind who can keep a ship going without gas."

It was the older man's turn to stand thoughtful.

"That is a problem," he finally said, "which we must in some way solve."

Tumstead's repeated laugh was edged with bitterness.

"I've gathered in everything that's lying round loose between here and the Pole," he protested. "And the next pinch may put us all in the dog-house."

"I think not," said the other. "And we have a problem more imminent."

"What problem?"

"Those snoopers which you spoke of. A means must be found to discourage them." The speaker's glance circled about in the uncertain light that surrounded him. "They may be closer than we imagine."

As Frayne disappeared within the tent Tumstead groped about for his fallen cup and reached once more for the coffeepot. Slade, watching him, backed quietly away through the underbrush. But his retreat was a brief one. He worked his way down the hollow between the hills and slowly ascended the opposing slope. Then, seeking what cover he could find, he circled back toward the lake front. He stopped, from time to time, to listen and look. But nothing, as he went, came between him and the object of his advance.

That objective was the shadowy tangle of spruce trees at the water's edge. He noticed, as he drew nearer, how a rough ramp of spruce logs had been built out from the hillside. It was so plainly a landing stage, to make easier the passing of heavy freight into a plane cabin, that no shock of surprise touched Slade when he peered under the matted treetops. For, standing there in the shadows, he saw the stolen Lockheed.

He climbed to the rough-timbered ramp and advanced to where two filled ore bags stood together at its outer edge. He stooped over one of the bags, intent on determining its contents.

He failed to see the bare-shouldered and burly figure that emerged from the tree shadows behind him and quietly reached for a spruce bole as long as the long bare arm that wielded it.

He failed to hear any movement as the newcomer crept forward, as silent as a shadow, and brought the spruce bole down on the stooping flyer's head.

Slade went down like a clouted rabbit.

Slade, as consciousness slowly returned to him, found it no easy matter to orient himself. His head throbbed and his body seemed cramped into quivering helplessness. Then the singing in his ears and the quivering of his frame merged into the throb and drone of a motor. He awakened to the fact that he was in a plane, and that plane was in flight.

He failed to see the bare-shouldered and burly figure that emerged from the tree shadows.

He thought, at first, that his bodily helplessness was due to being so tightly wedged in between soiled ore bags and the pilot's seat. But it was due, he found after an effort or two to move, to the fact that both his hands and feet were tied.

Memory came back to him as he lay back trying to figure out the reason for all this. The final mists eddied away as he looked up and saw that the man at the controls was Tumstead. Slade made no effort to speak. Instead, he quietly tugged and twisted, in the hope of freeing himself. But his struggles were without result.

The plane's pilot, however, must have become conscious of them, for his smile was sardonic as he glanced back over a shrugging shoulder.

"Coming round?" he nonchalantly called out.

"What does this mean?" demanded Slade.

Tumstead flew on for a moment or two of silence.

"It means you're lucky to be alive," he finally announced. "That bullhead who knocked you out went back for his Luger. He was all set to give you the works."

Slade seemed to be giving thought to that statement.

"What are you going to do with me?" he asked.

"That," retorted Tumstead, "is what I'm trying to figure out. The easiest way, of course, would be to drop you overboard. And that's where you'd go, all right, if we both weren't flyers."

"Then as one flyer to another," Slade asked, "why did you steal this plane?"

Tumstead's reply to that was a snort of laughter.

"That's my own affair," he said.

"And you should have known better than nose in on it."

"You're flying for Frayne," said his prisoner.

"Can you suggest anything better?"

Slade considered that question.

"Yes," he answered, "I know something better."

"What?"

"To head back to Waterways with this Lockheed, while there's still a chance of saving your scalp."

Tumstead's laugh was hard and reckless.

"Not on your life," he proclaimed. "It's your scalp you need to worry about. And it's going to be some time before you get back to Waterways."

"Why do you say that?"

"Tumstead's glance went over the terrain beneath his floats.

"Because, a little farther on, I'm going to drop you where you'll stay anchored for a considerable stretch of time," he said.

Slade's response to that was to struggle against the cords constricting his wrists and ankles. But those struggles, he still found, were useless.

"Are we over the Anawotto?" questioned Slade, embittered by the thought of his helplessness.

"We are," answered Tumstead.

"And it's sure empty country."

Slade's trained ear told him, a minute later, that they were dropping lower. But from where he lay he could see nothing of the outside world. He concluded, from the length of time that Tumstead taxied along the surface, that the waterway on which they had landed was by no means a small one. He could hear the grating of the pontoons on a gravel bar.

"All out," cried Tumstead.

He half-swung and half-tossed his prisoner ashore, where with a still deeper sense of helplessness Slade tumbled full length along the pebbled slope. There, after taking a shuddering breath or two, he writhed and twisted about until he was able to fight his way back to a sitting posture.

"So you're going to leave me here?" he said.

"I am," said Tumstead. "And I can't waste time on talk."

"But why are you doing this?" persisted Slade.

"Because you got too ambitious."

Slade watched the plane being warped around in the shallows. A surge of desolation swept over him as he glanced about at the ice-scored and barren-ridged island surrounded by its lonely reaches of open water. That island, he saw, had little to offer him. Any scrub timber that grew between its ridges, he realized, would be too small for the making of a raft. And even with a raft to deliver him from that watery prison, he further realized as he stared about at the distant blue-hazed horizon, he would face a wilderness quite empty of life.

"I won't get away," he said, "and you know it."

Tumstead's laugh was defensively gruff.

"Let's hope for the best," he said as he turned back to his cabin. He emerged, a moment later, with a sheath-knife in an old and battered holster. But as the other man unsheathed the knife Slade saw that the blade was keen-edged and long. His eye remained on Tumstead as he stepped closer, the knife in his hand. The quick look of apprehension that came from his captive caused Tumstead's dark face to crease with a smile.

"I'm not that yellow," the latter announced as he stooped and cut the cords that bound Slade's wrists together. He was about to do the same with the cords that bound the ankles. But on second thought he drew back and replaced the knife in its sheath. This, after a moment's hesitation, he tossed a few paces farther up the shore slope, discreetly out of reach. Then as Slade sat trying to work life back into his benumbed hands the older man coolly explored the other's pockets. From them he extracted a lighter and a package of cigarettes.

A cynic smile played about his lips as he touched the little flame to a cigarette end and tossed the lighter back to its owner.

"You may need that," he observed. "But seeing I've been out of fags for over a week I'll keep the smokes."

"So that's all the chance you give me," said Slade, watching him as he luxuriously inhaled.

"It's about all I can afford," Tumstead said as he swung about and glanced down at his fellow-flyer. No look of commiseration softened the older man's face. But for a moment a frown of meditation wrinkled his forehead, a frown followed by a small shoulder movement of dismissal.

"Happy landing," was his curtly ironic exclamation as he turned away and climbed aboard his ship.

The man on the beach waited for the roar of the motor. But that familiar crescendo of sound failed to greet him. What he heard, instead, was Tumstead's cynically indifferent voice calling down to him. At the same time a package was tossed ashore.

"That's a pound of German army chocolate," Tumstead announced as he tossed still another object toward the motionless figure on the shore slope. "And here's a can of bully-beef."

He shrugged when no word of gratitude came from that still motionless figure.

"And here's something for your cigarettes," was Tumstead's last curt call as he threw overboard an empty tobacco-tin which struck Slade on the shoulder and came to a rest between his throbbing knees.

Slade sat watching the plane as it taxied across the gray-blue water and rose in the air. He continued to watch as it headed northward over the blue-misted ridges and faded away along the empty skyline.

He sat without moving until the ache in his tightly bound ankles reminded him of other things. Then he looked about for the sheath-knife. He gave a gulp of gratitude when he saw it lying there, within ten paces of him. It took him some time to worm his way to the knife. But a little of the listlessness went out of his face as his fingers closed about the heavy haft.

He lost no time in sawing through the cords and freeing his feet. When he attempted to stand up, however, he discovered that his benumbed legs were unable to support him. He had to sit there, for several minutes, waiting for feeling to come back to them.

ADAM AND EVE: TEMPTATION AND SIN

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 3:1-13, 23, 24. GOLDEN TEXT—The soul that sinneth, it shall die.—Ezekiel 18:4.

The finished creation of God was "very good," but before long it was marred by sin. Dr. Hart-Davies in his book on Genesis speaks of a brick from the walls of ancient Babylon, now in the British museum. It bears the imprint of one of Babylon's mighty kings. Right over the center of the royal seal is deeply impressed the footprint of a 'pariah' dog which apparently trod upon it when it was soft and plastic. Human nature is like that brick. Man originally was made in the image of God, but over the divine likeness there has been superimposed the dirty disfigurement of the devil's imprint.

We see first in our lesson the appearance of the serpent who is the subtle emissary of—

I. Satan (vv. 1-5).

Man, because he was made in God's image, was not a mere automaton, having no moral choice. He was a free being who had to choose between good and evil. Obedience to God is the underlying moral principle of the universe. Man was given an opportunity to obey the prohibition of one tree in the Garden of Eden. The principle of prohibition in the midst of a world of privilege thus has divine sanction.

Satan provided the occasion for man's fall into sin. He came, not as the cloven-hoofed monstrosity of modern cartoonists, but as a creature more subtle than all other creation. His approach in our day is just as smooth and cultured (II Cor. 11:14).

II. Sin (v. 6).

Let us be clear that sin is not a necessity, not a natural weakness of man, not a falling upward in the progress of the race, but a deliberate choice to transgress the law of God. At once it showed its true nature by reaching out and leading another into transgression.

The one who listens to a slander against God can easily begin to doubt His Word, and then it is not difficult to look at what God has forbidden. Then the desire of the flesh takes hold and disobedience follows (cf. I John 2:16).

III. Shame (vv. 7-13).

The breaking of a right relationship with God broke the perfection of man's fellowship with man. Innocence was swallowed up in a sense of shame. But the shame is far deeper than a sense of nakedness. It speaks of a heart marked with sin which makes man hide from God.

Satan had promised Adam and Eve that they should know more about good and evil (v. 5), but all the good they learned about was what they had now lost, and the evil they learned was the sin which now blackened their souls and darkened their lives.

And with them fell the whole human race, for Paul tells us in Romans 5:12 that "by one man sin entered the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned."

IV. Sorrow (vv. 23, 24).

Man and his help meet, who had begun with such glorious promise in the garden, now had the great sorrow of being driven out by God. No longer to be trusted, man was kept out by the cherubim, mysterious angelic beings with the awful flaming sword.

Labor, which in the garden had been but a pleasant diversion, became a struggle against a thorn-infested ground. Sorrow was linked with motherhood, and man began to bear the heavy responsibilities of life (see Gen. 3:14-19).

But we must not close our lesson without pointing out that in the midst of judgment God provided mercy. The promise of man's redemption is written first in God's Book in Genesis 3:15, and from there the scarlet thread of redemptive truth runs right through the Bible to its last chapter.

Even in judging the first Adam for his sin, God thus promised the coming of the second Adam who was to redeem the race. We became members of the first Adam's family by natural birth—without the privilege of choice. We become members of the family of the second Adam by a new birth—a spiritual, supernatural rebirth. But the latter is by our own choice! (I Cor. 15:21, 22, 45).

Wayside Ministering

Jesus was never bound down to the size of his audience. He was neither elated by a big crowd nor discouraged by an audience of one. In fact, some of his most wonderful teachings were given to individuals whom he met by the wayside, the woman of Samaria, Zacchaeus, Mary and Martha, the Syrophenician woman, Nicodemus, the woman taken in adultery, the blind man in the temple, are only a few of those to whom Jesus gave of his best as he passed them on the way.

NEW IDEAS for Home-makers

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

A SMARTLY flounced blanket chest with contrasting cushion is a useful addition to any bedroom. It serves as a convenient seat; and extra covers are right at hand on chilly nights. A pair of these, covered to match spreads, would go well with twin beds.

Plan the size of your chest to fill your needs and space. It may be made of one-inch pine and should be about 15 inches high without the cushion. Make the flounce with double fullness—that is, twice as long as the space it is to fill after it is gathered. The cushion may be filled with cotton padding, feathers or down.

Numerous surveys have shown that tobacco is the No. 1 gift on the service man's list. A favorite with many of our soldiers, sailors, marines, and Coast Guardsmen is Prince Albert, the largest-selling smoking tobacco in the world. If you have a friend or relative in the Army, Navy, Marines, or Coast Guard who smokes a pipe or rolls-his-own, send a pound can of Prince Albert. Citizens Service Committee,
Dear Friends:

Received your package and was certainly very pleased to get it. May I thank you now for everything.

Tell Herman Freitag that when he addresses my package not to lower my rank as he did. Its Carpenters Mate second class. We don't have anything to do with somebody as low as a Seaman. Or was it Maxwell?

Well folks I do miss being with you, but am getting along fine in the Navy. It surely is the finest in the world and everything is going to end as we all want it to. It may take a little time, but let's keep our chins up and give them all we got.

We arrived in Norfolk Monday the fifteenth, but won't be here very long about ten days and then we will be moving. Where we will go of course we don't know. But no matter where we will go I know your good wishes and prayers will help us a lot.

May I thank you again for the good work and grand things you are doing for the service men.

I remain, Sincerely yours,
Your Friend, Harry Uthe.

Financing Workers' Jobs

It takes almost $9,000 to finance an industrial worker's job. That sum, as an average, must be invested in buildings and tools before there can be a job.

Many millions of Americans—merchants, farmers, professional people, workers, bankers, those in all lines—supply the financing. They invest their savings in industry, receiving in turn stocks and bonds, on which they expect to, and should, receive their fair share of return.

Industry has three bills to pay. One is wages to the worker. A second is taxes to local, state and federal governments. The third is wages on the money invested in factories and tools.

The law assures the worker of his wages. Government takes what it assesses in taxes. Those who pay for the factories and tools get a return if there is anything left.

On the average, 65 cents out of each dollar received by industry goes to labor. Taxes—local, state and national—take 28 cents. Management and selling take 3 cents. Capital—the people who provide the money—gets 2 cents. The other 2 cents goes to replace buildings and tools as they wear out or for necessary expansion.

It is the American system of free competition that makes the financing and growth of industry possible. It is that system which creates new industries.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"God" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 5.

The Golden Text was, "There is none holy as the Lord: for there is none beside thee: neither is there any rock like our God" (1 Samuel 2:2).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all" (1 Chron. 29:11).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Mind is the I AM, or infinity. Mind never enters the finite. God is indivisible. A portion of God could not enter man; neither could God's fullness be reflected by a single man, else God would be manifestly finite, lose the deity character, and become less than God. Allness is the measure of the infinite, and nothing less can express God" (P. 336).

Orderly Marketing

The orderly marketing of perishable farm products, as made possible through the American system, offers the producer the greatest possible assurance of selling his crop at a good price. It enables the merchant to buy with confidence and sell at a profit. It has vastly increased consumption by getting consumers in the habit of buying fresh fruits and vegetables the year round. It has built up consumer confidence by encouraging honest grading, proper packing and shipping, and dependable quality.

A REAL PLACE FOR ECONOMY

Dr. George S. Benson, president of Harding College at Searcy, Ark., in his publication "Looking Ahead", recommends specific reductions in the civic expenditures budget now before Congress for the coming fiscal year:

Elimination of NYA AND CCC	$102 million
Reduction in aids to agriculture	750 million
(Amount now being requested is $354,050,000)
Reduction of 75 per cent in WPA	656 million
(Present estimate for this year $875,000,000)
Reduction of 50 per cent in departmental free mailing	25 million
(Cost of free mailings in 1941 from departments at Washington $49,020,190—increased of about $10,000,000 over last year)
A cut of 50 per cent in the present Rivers and Harbors Omnibus Bill	500 million
	$2,033,000,000

Asked for his reasons for the elimination of National Youth Administration and CCC, Dr. Benson replied:

"It is my understanding that the average cost per enrollee in the CCC is $1,025 a year.

"The minimum at Harding College for board, room, tuition and fees during the past several years has been $338.25 a year, so we could keep three students on what it costs the government to keep one in the CCC and have enough left over to furnish postage for their letters.

"If each student would like to work a little bit on expenses, we could keep four students on that amount of money, and they do work a good deal in the CCC.

"We could give these young men education under qualified professors in a standard four year college at the figure given above.

"Even if the government should wish to provide an allowance for each student taking the training there would still be no necessity for maintaining the professors, paying rent on expensive buildings, etc. because the existing schools can do the work with their own present personnel.

A Case in Kansas City.
"I made investigation in Kansas City and found 11 NYA schools there doing woodwork and metal work, and secretarial training.

"I found business colleges in Kansas City fully qualified to do better work than the NYA secretarial schools and also with adequate room to take care of students. I found the high schools in Kansas City already qualified to do the wood and metal work and I found the management saying that they could easily handle the students and do better work than the NYA schools were doing."

There are dozens of these smaller colleges scattered in almost every section of the United States. They have a proud record in the educational history of this country and have won for themselves an enviable position in our educational field.

Non-Essential Spending

"I know of no more patriotic obligation on the part of every citizen of America than to co-operate with the Congress of the United States in reducing non-essential spending and in preserving the financial solvency of our Republic. Our non-essential spending should be reduced by at least two billions annually."—Senator Harry F. Byrd.

A STATE REDUCES ITS 1942 BUDGET

The state of Arkansas contradicts the well-known saying that "it can't be done." Arkansas made the headlines the other day by the simple process of reducing its state budget in the amount of half a million dollars.

It is real news when a public body trims its own financial sails to help meet the emergency created by war, so here is an example which other states might well follow.

The amount of this particular budget reduction was small as budgets go these days, but the principle is no less impressive. No doubt this kind of financing helps to account for the fact that Arkansas has more than 18 million dollars in its treasury, that it owns 3 million dollars' worth of its own bonds, and that it has a fund of $1,643,000.00 for "calling" additional bonds.

There is need for strict economy in civic budgets, whether federal, state, county or township.

Chicagoland Florists Are Backing You, Uncle Sam!

We're supporting many patriotic activities, Red Cross, U.S.O. Navy Relief, etc., and we're buying a big share of War Bonds. We're back of the conservation plan 100%, and we're ready to co-operate anytime through the strong unified effort of our Association in this all-out war program.

ONE DELIVERY PER DAY to Conserve Rubber

The florists of Chicagoland are complying with Uncle Sam's orders and restricting deliveries to one per day to any one customer. Mileage is being reduced at least 25% and conservation of all transportation equipment, tires and gasoline is our cardinal aim. With the co-operation of our customer friends in placing orders earlier and by "cash and carry" shopping whenever possible, the purpose of this war measure can be achieved without greatly affecting our flower service to you.

NEW SUMMER BUSINESS HOURS will release the florist and his employees for Red Cross, and Civilian Defense work. Many of the florists of Chicagoland have indicated their desire to co-operate in this patriotic effort and will conform to the following summer schedule effective July 1 through August:

Weekdays 8:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.
Sunday 9:00 a.m. to 12 noon

Florists in communities where there are recognized shopping nights will, in most instances, remain open on these nights.

RETAIL DIVISION ALLIED FLORISTS ASSN.

At a special meeting of the Retail Division of the Allied Florists Association, Monday June 29-1942, called for the express purpose of considering store closing hours it was unanimously voted by those present that their summer business hours for their retail florist shops should be from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. week days and Sundays from 9 till noon except in those communities where there are regularly recognized shopping nights and in those cases the closing hours may coincide with the hours of the business district.

Gene Autry To Lead Rodeo At Soldier Field

Gene Autry, renowned star of radio, screen and stage, will personally lead the presentation of the Flying-A Ranch Stampede at Soldier Field in Chicago, opening on July 23 and closing on July 29.

More than $15,000.00 in prize money has been posted with the Rodeo Association of America for the competitive events, which is sufficient to lure the champion bronc riders, bare back riders, Brahm bull riders, calf ropers and steer wrestlers from their native haunts to the Windy City. In addition to the competitive events, there will be exhibitions of fancy roping, quadrille rides by the cowboys and cowgirls and trick riding. Autry will make two appearances: one with his famed horse, Champ and one as a singer of western ballads which have gained him a top ranking among radio stars.

To round out the program, an outstanding troupe of automobile stunt men will offer a series of death defying feats and the pick of the circus talent will perform amazing antics at incredible heights.

There will be a performance each night at 8 o'clock with matinees at 2:30 Saturday and Sunday.

Many Service Men Attending Riverview

Attendance records at Riverview, Chicago's famous amusement park, reveal so far this season, that many thousands of the persons who pass through the gates each week are service men in uniform, park officials announced today.

"Not only do the younger service men and their girl friends swarm to the park to go on the rides and see midway attractions, but many of those with wives and children also bring the entire family for an outing," George A. Schmidt, park president, pointed out.

A trip on the Moon Rocket proves a sure fire thrill to park visitors of all ages. This device is constructed so that each person rides in what resembles the cockpit of an airplane. As the mechanism gets underway, at high speed, shooting stars on the riders' left rotate in the opposite direction, completing an illusion of true rocket velocity.

For a really unique sensation, park enthusiasts choose the Crazy Ribbon, a roller coaster with an added kick created by each car twirling at unexpected moments. The experience of shooting up and down hill, while at the same time turning round and round, is not duplicated in any amusement center in the middlewest.

Sending In Needless Complaints

State Director of Selective Service Colonel Paul G. Armstrong made the emphatic statement today that far too many individuals of the civilian public are sending in complaints, almost all of which are found, upon investigation, to be groundless, concerning the status of young men who have not been called for Army service. "The public should be reminded," he said, that hundreds of young men who appear to be physically fit have been rejected by Army Medical Officers. Hundreds of other young men who are physically fit for Army duty have been deferred because they occupy key positions in essential war industries. It must be remembered that the tools of war are just as important to ultimate victory as are the men who use them. It takes man power to produce these tools.

State Headquarters has been receiving dozens of signed and unsigned communications from persons who are not aware of confidential information included in the registrant's file, or a certain few who may have malicious intent toward some young men they allege to be evading service. Whenever such a complaint appears to have any basis of fact an investigation is made. However, the Director pointed out that more than 99 percent of these investigations have shown the complaints to be without foundation. Colonel Armstrong, therefore, makes an urgent request that no complaints concerning the Selective Service status of any individual be sent to this Headquarters unless such a complaint can be reasonably substantiated by information in the possession of the informant.

War Exposition Indefinitely Postponed

The Directors of the United Nations War Exposition regret to announce that it has been necessary to postpone indefinitely the opening of the Exposition.

The decision follows the taking over for vital war purposes by the United States Army of the International Amphitheatre where the Exposition was to be held in the month of August. No other building in Chicago is available now or will be in the near future large enough to house the Exposition on the Lake Front under canvas.

The Chicago Park District kindly made available a large site in Burnham Park adjacent to Soldier Field, but a thorough survey by the Exposition staff indicates it would be impossible to complete the work of housing the valuable large and small trophies in tents there this summer.

The Directors highly appreciate the cooperation of Mayor Kelly

Dear Mrs. Hensel:
I don't know to whom I should properly address this letter, but I know that you had a part in packing the box that was sent to me by the Royal Neighbors, so I am writing to you.

It is really a treat to get a box from home, no matter what's in it. But when there are home made things in it, then it is doubly appreciated.

We have a bunch of fine fellows in our company, most of them are from Chicago and we have a very fine cooperative spirit throughout.

We are worked quite hard, but there are a number of entertainments provided for the service men. I have found every one very hospitable and most anxious to their share in winning this war.

Please be assured of my appreciation of the box

Sincerely,

Ellsworth

How to arrange food in your Refrigerator

Pin this helpful reminder near your refrigerator

Different kinds of foods require different degrees of temperature and humidity. All you need do is put the food in the right places as indicated above.

Not all foods need be kept in your refrigerator, but probably more than you have been placing there. For example, bread will stay fresh days longer if kept in the refrigerator (lower section).

Shelled nuts and chocolate keep better, too. Bananas should never be put in the refrigerator. And such items as mayonnaise, catsup, pickles and olives need not take up this valuable space.

To properly store and keep perishable vegetables, wash and skin off all surplus material before placing them in the crisper.

OAK FOREST

The Taxpayers Association will hold their annual picnic on July 19 at Fulton's Grove. There will be games for young and old and refreshments will be provided. Everyone is invited.

Mr. E. Tschulin, chairman of the Road and Real Estate Committee of the Taxpayers Association, received a promise from the County Commissioner's office that a culvert would be put in at 151st street and Cicero avenue in the near future so that the road may again be used.

The James T. Hickey family returned this week from a brief stay in Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. James Moyer visited their son in Niles, Michigan over the holiday week-end.

MAPLE LANE FLORIST
BACKING ALL-OUT
WAR PROGRAM

Maple Lane Florists 79th Street & Harlem Avenue, Oak Lawn, Ill., individually and collectively thru the Allied Florists Association of Illinois are staunchly supporting practically all of the patriotic activities, Red Cross, U. S. O., Navy Relief and others. They are enthusiastically buying War Bonds and many are selling War Savings Stamps.

Keeping the Service Men's Center in downtown Chicago afloat with fresh flowers is another contribution of the Florists Association. A tastefully arranged vase of fragrant flowers continuously graces the newly decorated lounge and brings a warm home-like atmosphere to this popular recreation center for the boys in service. Just as our boys are drafted to defend our country, flowers have been drafted to keep the "home front" brighter in our homes, churches and community meetings.

Chicagoland florists are proud of their service record. Several hundred stars are in the service flags of the flower growers, wholesalers and retail flower shops. Every week more and more of the young men in this great industry are leaving for the camps.

Maple Lane Florists are behind their boys tooth and nail. They are ready to co-operate anytime through the strong unified effort of the association in this all-out war program. They are back of the conservation plan 100 per cent. Deliveries have been restricted to one per day to any one customer. Mileage is being reduced at least 25 per cent, and conservation of all transportation equipment, tires and gasoline is their cardinal aim. With the co-operation of their customer friends in placing orders earlier and by "cash and carry" shopping whenever possible, the purpose of this war measure can be achieved without greatly affecting their flower service in this community.

To free the florists and his employees for evening hours spent on Red Cross, U. S. O. and Civilian Defense work, the following summer business hours were agreed upon at a recent meeting of the retail division of the florists association, effective July 1 through August: Weekdays 8:30 a. m. to 6:00 p. m., Weekends 9 a. m. to 12 Noon. In communities where there are regularly recognized shopping nights, the florists, in most instances, will remain open on these nights.

Many of the florists of Chicagoland have indicated their desire to co-operate in this patriotic effort among whom are the Maple Lane Florists, 79th Street and Harlem Avenue, Oak Lawn, Ill.

New Rock Island Head

John D. Farrington, whose appointment as Chief Executive Officer of the Rock Island lines, effective July 15, 1942, was approved by Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe in Chicago today, is one of the youngest chief executives in the railroad industry. At fifty one he becomes the head of one of the country's large trans-continental systems.

Farrington, whose railroad career started on the Great Northern in

JOHN D. FARRINGTON
Chief Executive Officer
Rock Island Lines, Chicago, Illinois
Effective July 15, 1942

1909, was with the Burlington road twenty six years prior to coming to the Rock Island. Starting as a time keeper with the Burlington he rose steadily through various posts in the track and transportation departments and was General Manager of the Fort Worth and Denver City Railroad, one of the Burlington's subsidiaries, when the Rock Island made him its Chief Operating Officer.

During the past six years, while Farrington has headed the Rock Island's operating department, the road has progressed far. Vast improvements have been made in road way and facilities; equipment has been modernized; the road's fifteen new, streamlined Rockets, said to be the largest fleet of Diesel powered passenger trains on any railroad in the country, were acquired and put in service by the Rock Island since Farrington became its operating head. Operating and transportation ratios—the figures that indicate the portion of each dollar that was spent to produce the transportation service for which it was received—have become the lowest in Rock Island history under Farrington's jurisdiction.

E. M. Durham, Jr., whom Farrington succeeded, resigned after six and one half years as the Rock Island's Chief Executive Officer, for purely personal reasons.

Our fighting men are doing their share. Here at home the least we can do is put 10% of our income in War Bonds for our share in America.

Insurance Assets Must Be Protected

Sixty-six million Americans have sacrificed and saved from their earnings to create through insurance 33 billion dollars of assets to protect them and their dependents in the event of death, sickness, accident and old age, and to reimburse them for losses due to fires and other casualties. In life insurance alone, more than 140 million policies are in force.

The 33 billion dollars which 66 million citizens have provided to guarantee their safety is largely held by insurance companies as a legal reserve to insure payment of policies. These reserves have been developed under state regulatory laws, and are held in trust, by the insurance companies, for the benefit of policyholders. The companies have the strength of well-managed, conservative, highly specialized groups, and they are forceful examples of the success of private initiative and management in this country.

Losses Negligible. The records show that through the years losses by policyholders in legal reserve companies, through misappropriation or mismanagement of insurance reserve funds, have been so small as to be negligible.

We have all come to regard insurance companies as safe and sound. Insurance is now looked upon as an outstanding example of American free enterprise. Many sound traditions have grown up around it.

The average American hates dependency. He wants to get on and up in the world by his own efforts. This is part of his American heritage. Each of the 66 million insured Americans has a personal stake in the 33 billions of assets held by the companies. Anything that may happen to the reserve, through destruction of our system of free enterprise, failure of investments, or change in managerial responsibility, is a matter of grave concern to every person who has invested money in an insurance policy.

An American Practice. Buying insurance has become a typical, voluntary American practice. Compulsory deduction from wages or income, for insurance under law, may be ideal in certain fields, but as a general practice it would destroy an essential part of our personal independence. Even in cases where deductions are compulsory, the use of the money collected should be limited to the purposes of insurance.

The right of each American to make his own decisions as to how, when, and in what amount, he shall use his money for insurance is as sacred as his right to choose a business or trade. He may make mistakes, but they will be his mistakes as compared to mass mistakes by government.

With the earners of money free to invest according to their own wishes and judgment, the records will continue to show an overwhelming percentage of happiness and safety.

Races Aren't Won By Hobbled Horses

Two rules which will affect the lives of American citizens, whether employers or employees, recently were laid down by the National War Labor Board.

One case was that of the Walker-Turner Company at Plainfield, N. J. This firm manufactures vital machine tools. The other was the case of certain plants of the International Harvester Company.

These rulings compel, first, members of a labor union to remain union members and, second, the employer to discharge any employee who ceases to be a member of the union.

The principle of the closed shop is instantly recognized in these two rulings. The closed shop involves compulsory membership in a union in order to work, whether it be called "maintenance of membership," or "union security," or what not.

Uncle Sam has given American industry a tremendous job, to provide enough guns, tanks, planes and ships to win this cut-throat war. Industry has shown that it can and will do this war job if permitted to do so. But if we want a horse to win a race, we must not tie up one leg.

Only One-Fourth Union Members. Of the persons gainfully employed in the United States, about one-fourth are members of unions. When we say to industry, "produce—and expand to produce more, that this country may become the arsenal of democracy," and then in the next breath deny to industry the vast pool of competent workmen in our rural communities unless those persons join a particular union in a particular industry, we are in effect putting hobbles on the horse and expecting it to win a desperate race; because the closed shop does not permit industry to hire and keep the best men it can find regardless of their union affiliations.

President Roosevelt expressed an American tradition when he said: "We should not demand special gains or special privileges or special advantages for any group or occupation."

We are all Americans. We are all united in our desire to win the war.

Industry, commerce, agriculture and labor must all do their part without stint, without fear or favor, each confident in the others' patriotism and their will to produce for our armed forces and our allies.

"CLOSED SHOPS" IN PRACTICE

Fundamental facts of interest to every thinking American are beginning to shine through the sordid picture of "job racketeering" during the construction of the Elwood-Wilmington munitions plant.

Fundamental facts are not concerned with persons. The construction of the Elwood-Wilmington munitions plant was a "closed shop." It appears, according to the daily press, that one local union, whose membership is made up of unskilled workers, initiated some 19,700 new members during 1941. There were about 12,000 labor jobs in the entire plant. Hence, the turnover in this union alone was some 7,500 laborers. Each of these 19,700 new members paid $15 initiation fee and $6 advance dues in the local involved. Over $400,000 was taken from the lowest paid bracket of common labor on this one construction job. Surely a $400,000 "take" is big business and places someone in the economic royalist class.

In the Chicago Tribune of May 29th there was printed a partial list of high salaries paid corporation management in 1941. In some instances even these high salaries appear to have been raised or augmented by annuities after retirement and other financial reward.

Vicious Monopoly. These are facts which must be faced and a solution arrived at in the preservation of our American free enterprise. They seem to indicate without question that the "closed shop" in labor unions gives opportunity for just such vicious monopoly as when the monopoly is capitalistic. The facts do not indicate much difference between taking $400,000 in less than a year from common labor in one plant for the opportunity to work and an official of a corporation who insists upon an enormous salary and security after retirement, when his common stockholders receive little or no dividend, and there is nothing in the facts to justify his action.

Luckily, in both labor and industry, the percentage of selfish racketeers who demand "theirs" regardless of the rights of others or the public is very very low. Unfortunately, it is this small percentage who get the bulk of the publicity.

Need for Constructive Effort. We are at war. Our taxes are a heavy burden. Common stockholders and common labor are the backbone of our financial and industrial world. The "closed shop" for labor unions or selfish indulgence of corporate power can have no constructive part in building and defending the ideals of our American system of free opportunity.

Every working man has the right to work and to enjoy the fruits of his labor. Every common stockholder has the right to demand economy on the part of those he has entrusted with the management of his investment.

DEMAND FOR UNHAMPERED WAR EFFORT

A forty-eight-hour week in war industries, the cessation of strikes, and the forced adjustment of labor disputes when voluntary agreement fails, were called for in a recent address by Earl C. Adams, president of the Illinois Bankers' Association.

Production of the tools of war must not stop for a single minute, said Mr. Adams, and added:

"Why shouldn't you tell your Congressmen and your Senators that in this time of trial a normal work week should be placed at forty-eight hours, with overtime to start with the forty-ninth hour, recognizing the fact that the forty-hour week was originally adopted with the idea of spreading the work when employment was slack?"

Mr. Adams continued: "Why shouldn't you say that the status quo as to union shop, or closed shop or open shop, shall be maintained during this emergency so that disturbing and disruptive influences may not hinder the production we must have? Why shouldn't you say that the financial affairs of unions, both during and after this emergency, shall be subject to examination by constituted authority in the interest of the public welfare?"

Faith in the American system of private enterprise makes its adherents confident that industry is doing its full part, in a magnificent way, to achieve victory. However, Mr. Adams points out conditions that make the task unduly hard, and many will agree that such handicaps must be removed in order that success may come more quickly and at less cost.

High Standards

America's standard of living has reached a height unknown anywhere else, due to the unhampered operation of the American system of free private enterprise which encourages cooperation between labor, capital and management, and permits intelligent industrial planning.

Cool, Ice-Tinkling Drinks Ward Off Summer Fatigue
(See Recipes Below.)

Sugar-Saving Drinks

When the thermometer's perched on the highest rung of the temperature ladder, do you feel your spirits sagging, your energy running low? Yes, the warm weather begins to take its toll just about the time you feel you need push and drive most. But, make a comeback, quickly and easily with a healthful, fruit-juicy drink served in a tall, colorful frosty glass.

An attractively served drink will perk up your spirits more quickly than you can say "Jack Spratt!" Plan to freeze some of those fragrant mint leaves and those few odd berries left over from the shortcake, with water in the ice cube trays for they make a pretty drink. Or, if you like colored ice cubes that prevent your summer beverage from taking on a watery taste, freeze fruit juices diluted with water into ice cubes. You'll like this.

There's a lot more to be said for cool drinks other than their general appearance. Besides providing your system with the vitamin C, in excellent quantity, and A and B in good quantity, the citrus fruits, oranges and lemons, act as alkalizers for the system. This acts as insurance against fatigue, which is a big thing in warmer weather.

Milk and ice cream are perfect ingredients with fruit juices for cooling drinks. Not only do they contain most of the requisites for a well-balanced diet, but they are easy to take and lend themselves in pleasant combination with other foods.

Your biggest problem with summer drinks will come in trying to save sugar. But don't let this stump you, for you can use fruit juices that have natural sugars, honey as a sweetener, and milk and ice cream, which need very little or no other sweetening at all.

Try fruit powders, too, using 1 level tablespoon of the fruit powder with 3 teaspoons of honey to 1 glass of water or milk. Fill the glass with shimmering ice chips and you have an excellent thirst quencher in a wink.

Fruit juices used with ice cream and honey are kind to the sugar ration:

*Orange Cooler. (Makes 1½ quarts)

2 cups orange juice
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup maraschino cherry juice
1 cup ginger ale
2 tablespoons honey

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Definite news has reached me on the spice situation, so now you homemakers can see exactly what is available in this line.

There's enough to go around freely of: cayenne, red pepper, mustard, chili powder, dill seeds, oregano, paprika, curry, cake spice, mixed pickling spice, celery seed, onion and garlic salt and powder, bay leaves, marjoram, cardamom, anise and black pepper.

Careful use is indicated for these spices: cinnamon, mace, allspice, white pepper, cloves, nutmeg and ginger.

Canning rubbers, lids, jars, etc. are available in sufficient quantity for this season's produce. An extra ration of sugar for canners will be allowed, amounting to five pounds per person for the year.

There's a possibility that coffee, tea, and cocoa may come in for rationing. Homemakers are also advised to save and conserve all fats, grease and oil. If you cannot use the fat at home, keep it well preserved in a cool place to prevent its becoming rancid, then bring to your butcher.

SUMMER REFRESHMENTS

- Orange slices
- Maraschino cherries with stems
- Sprigs of mint leaves

Place orange ice in punch bowl and pour in ginger ale. Garnish with orange slices attractively cut and floated in punch. Add cherries and mint sprigs.

Milk drinks make cool, tempting refreshments, and are just the thing for afternoon or evening snacks:

Orange Quench. (Serves 1)

- ¾ cup milk
- ¼ cup orange juice
- 1 teaspoon sugar

Combine ingredients and beat until thoroughly blended. Serve chilled.

*Root Beer Flip. (Serves 1)

- ½ cup root beer

Maple Cooler. (Serves 1)

- 2 tablespoons maple syrup
- ¼ teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup milk

Combine ingredients and beat one minute. Top with whipped cream, if desired.

You will be driving around less these summer evenings for your breath of fresh air, but you will probably spend more time on your back porch, having the neighbors drop in and serving them simple drinks and a few sugar-saving cookies for the in-between-meal snack. You'll enjoy both of these recipes:

*Honey Chocolate Nut Cookies.

- ½ cup butter
- 2 squares unsweetened chocolate
- 2 eggs, well beaten
- ½ cup honey
- ½ cup sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¾ cup sifted flour
- ½ cup chopped nuts

Melt butter and chocolate over hot water and stir until blended. Combine eggs, sugar, honey and salt in bowl. Add flour which has been sifted once before measuring. Mix thoroughly, add chocolate mixture and beat until smooth. Add nuts. Drop from spoonfuls on greased baking sheet, and bake in a slow (300-degree) oven 15 minutes. Remove from sheet immediately. The cookies taste better when mellowed, so pack in a tight container between layers of waxed paper.

*Chocolate Crunch.

- ½ pound semi-sweet or sweet milk chocolate
- 1 cup oven-popped rice cereal

Melt chocolate over hot water. Add cereal and stir until blended. Pack into a pan lined with waxed paper. Allow to set until chocolate hardens, then cut into squares.

Proof of Love

By

BARBARA ANN BENEDICT
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

"It's only a matter of time, Malcolm Goss told the girl, before you'll love me. I'm sure of it."

There was nothing of conceit in his manner, and Angela shook her head. "Time hasn't anything to do with it. I'm—we're not the same kind of people."

Malcolm frowned. "You've hardly given me a chance to plead my cause. Stay a little longer anyway," he urged. "Wait until the first snow. It's beautiful on the mountains. You'll like it."

Angela gazed up toward the high-flung peaks of the Lockton range. Mentally she pictured their snow-laden slopes beneath a wintry sun. "Yes," she said. "They must be. Everything is beautiful up here." She turned to him, smiling brightly. "All right. Until the first snowfall, then."

It came sooner than they expected. Two weeks later the sun dropped into a bank of clouds at mid-afternoon. It began to snow shortly after dark, lightly at first, developing by morning into a raging blizzard. Angela was delighted, thrilled. But by the second day she began to doubt. And on the third day with the storm still raging, she sought out the clerk in the tiny mountain hotel.

"Oh, I hate you for this!" she said.

"When," she asked, will the stage leave for the railroad?"

He looked at her curiously and smiled. "Next April. Possibly May."

"There's no way of getting out before then?"

"None. Ridge Peak is always snowbound from October to April."

"But—but the Pass? Aren't there dogs?"

The clerk shook his head. "It's been done, once or twice. And attempted a half dozen times."

"You mean the others failed?"

He nodded. "Mighty dangerous business. Only a fool would try it."

The door behind them opened. Malcolm Goss was standing there, watching her. Furious, she confronted him.

"You knew! You knew all the time! You thought if I had to stay I—you—I!" She left the sentence unfinished. Her eyes blazed.

He regarded her solemnly. "You really mean that?"

"Of course I do. What else am I to think? Oh—I hate you for this!" She turned away, but his hand gripped her shoulder, swung her back.

"Listen. The storm's about over. It hasn't been as bad as it seemed. Mostly wind. We could make it—over the pass—if you care to try."

His voice was a challenge. For a moment their eyes clashed. Angela tossed her head. "When can we start?"

"In an hour. Get your things. Leave as much as you can behind. Dress warmly. I'll arrange for the dogs."

He left her. She went to her room, sorted over her things, made up a bundle of the bare necessities. Waiting for Malcolm, she wondered whether the new feeling that assailed her was renewed anger—or fear.

In an hour she went downstairs again. Malcolm was waiting, talking to the clerk. The latter looked worried.

"All right. We'd better get going," Malcolm came across the floor, glanced at her bundle approvingly and nodded toward the door. There were furs in the sleigh and he tucked them around her. The snow had stopped. There were rifts in the clouds. She lifted her eyes to the peaks of Lockton range. They were white, a whiteness that was sinister and mocking. A little tremor ran through her body.

Toward sunset she dozed; when she awoke they had stopped. A fire was burning and she could smell coffee. A full moon was riding high above the hemlocks in a sky free of clouds.

Malcolm arose from his squatting position before the fire. "You'd better get out and exercise a bit. Coffee and bacon ready in five minutes."

Angela climbed out of the sleigh, conscious of cramped limbs. "Do we camp here?" Her tone was matter of fact.

"No. We'll not camp at all. The moon's bright, and the wind may rise any moment." He tried and failed to keep anxiety from his voice. Angela looked at him and then glanced up through the trees. Already their crowns were beginning to sway gently.

She had no way of knowing what a rising wind might mean—not until they reached the height-of-land. A gale was blowing. It was as though another blizzard had come up, so thick were the swirling particles of snow.

Angela burrowed down in the robes. She tried not to think of what the clerk had said. Hours later they stopped. Malcolm Goss appeared beside the sleigh, a blur of white.

"Cold?" She heard his voice above the roar of wind.

"Not a bit," she flung back gayly. "I like it."

He hesitated a moment, then returned to the gee pole. Angela was secretly pleased with herself.

Angela never knew how close to death they came that night. But she guessed at least half of it. She remembered dropping off to sleep again. When she awoke it was daylight. The wind had died. Men on snowshoes were milling about the sleigh. She saw another dog team—and then she saw that they were transferring something from behind her to another sleigh.

She heard a man say: "Oh, I guess he'll live. . . . Wonder why the crazy fool tried it? . . . Who's that dame?" The voice died. Angela struggled to get out, but the sleigh was in motion again, and the other team had gone.

Later they stopped at a cabin. Someone came and helped her inside. She was surprised at her own helplessness. Looking around, she saw Malcolm stretched out on a bunk, and she flew to him.

He was conscious, but she knew enough about frostbite to realize the danger. Turning, she ordered the men to bring her cold water and cloths.

Hours later Malcolm returned to wakefulness. He looked at her and grinned. Angela felt a twinge of pain, as though pricked with a knife, though she knew it was nothing more than conscience. She had been thinking about her gayety up there on the pass. Now it seemed like levity.

"I knew if you gave me time I'd make you love me."

She looked at him, suddenly realizing what a fool she'd been. She put her thoughts into words, and he grinned.

"We're both fools," he said. "Only a fool would attempt the pass—Glad we did though—otherwise—you might never have known!"

Suddenly she was on her knees, her arms about his head. "Oh, Malcolm, you are a fool. A great big, lovable fool. That's—that's why I love you so."

He nodded. "Sure. Every man has to make a fool of himself over a woman sometime in his life. I—I just chose a way that was different."

His eyes closed. She left him sleeping. Outside, she looked up at the pass. It was no longer sinister and mocking. It seemed to smile. And she smiled back.

Psychology Found in Greeting Cards Noted

A recent nation-wide survey conducted by expert psychologists reveals the importance to the public of greeting cards. It was learned that:

Greeting cards are a means by which people who find difficulty in expressing themselves may easily and gracefully convey their greetings and good wishes to others.

Greeting cards help to celebrate holidays and occasions of special significance. Thus, in providing rallying points for the closer unification of our people, they help to preserve, in our social structures, values which otherwise might be lost.

Greeting cards, at a time when many separations are occasioned, and many disruptions of family life take place, help to overcome the anxieties of loneliness, and make people better able to cope with the difficulties confronting them.

The emotional impact of the greeting card on the recipient is best demonstrated by the fact that most people who receive greeting cards preserve them for at least a little while before disposing of them. When discarded, greeting cards go on to serve a further purpose by yielding their raw materials for reprocessing.

The survey further discloses that any restriction in the distribution of greeting cards would result in the use of some substitute for the exchange of greetings and good wishes—and that this substitute would require the use of paper in equal or greater amounts than now used in the production of greeting cards.

Thus, the greeting card serves the public interest, providing emotional outlets and social gratifications on a desirable non-wasteful basis.

Remarkable

Man is the only meat-eating primate. Goldfish can survive freezing of the water they swim in. A single housefly, if all its descendants lived and bred, would be an ancestor of 2,000,000 flies at the end of one summer. A male swan is called a cob; a female, a pen; a young swan, a cygnet. Natives of Burma believe the slow loris doesn't eat but lives on the rays of the moon.

When ironing no matter what the article, the important thing is to iron it until absolutely dry.

Use a whisk broom, kept for the purpose, and hot water to sprinkle the clothes. They will be more evenly dampened than when sprinkled by hand.

Tiny pearl onions make tempting garnishes for vegetable salads or canapés.

Save all soot that accumulates in fireplaces and chimneys. Applied dry as a dressing on lawns or in liquid form to plants it makes an excellent fertilizer. After mixing soot with water let stand until water is clear. Twice a week is often enough to use it on plants.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!
